

Ramona*, Chapter 17 notes

A Visit to Hartsel's Store

Ch. 17 VOCABULARY

(in order of appearance) subterfuges. Deceit used to achieve one's goal pretences. Attempts to make something appear true makeshifts. Temporary devices wonted. Accustomed

yon. Yonder; over there taciturn. Uncommunicative; reserved indignant. Upset, angry remonstrance. Protest dejected. Depressed; sad destitute. Poor

rollicking. Lively and amusing doggedly. Showing tenacity and grim persistence assentingly. Agreeing; consenting restive. Unable to remain still or silent implacable. Unable to be appeased or satisfied stealthily. Cautiously; quietly malign. Speak critically about someone hearkening. Listening plight. Dangeous, difficult, or unfortunate situation mongrel. Having mixed bloodlines wayfarer. Person who travels on foot incredulity. Being unable to believe lurid. Unpleasantly bright; shocking; sensational punk. In this passage, “rotten wood” ejectment. Eviction from property lithe. Thin; graceful disdaining. Feeling that someone is unworthy invincible. Too powerful to be defeated repugnance. Intense disgust vehemently. Passionately; with great feeling ribald. Crudely referring to sexual matters tipsy. Slightly drunk

subterfuges

pretences

makeshifts

wonted

yon

taciturn

indignant

remonstrance

dejected

destitute

rollicking

doggedly

assentingly

restive

implacable

stealthily

malign

hearkening

plight

mongrel

wayfarer

incredulity

lurid

punk

ejectment

lithe

disdaining

invincible

repugnance

vehemently

ribald

tipsy